1. Course Synopsis

Popular culture shapes our common sense notions regarding women, men and sexualities. This course will investigate genders and sexualities in advertising, film, television, video, music and emphasize the ways that popular culture shapes our understanding of individual and collective identities. The course will interrogate popular culture texts in light of the following kinds of questions: What are the images that we see in popular culture and how do we read them? Who creates them and who disseminates these images? Who benefits from them? How is one sex marginalized in the gaze cast by the opposite sex in various popular cultural texts? This course is interdisciplinary and is situated at the intersections of women's studies, media studies and cultural studies. We will study topics relevant to the American and Asian contexts today. Students can use the critical theories and approaches of reading genders to analyze popular culture texts of other languages and cultures as their term assignments.
