Abstract:

Successful GRF proposals depend on a number of things :

- a sound theoretical framework that indicates a thorough understanding of the literature and the issues that need to be addressed in the field;
- a team of active researchers with proven track records and;
- research questions the answers to which have the potential to create new knowledge and move the field forward.

This work shop will address the last of these - research questions . The purpose is to generate - or share - research questions around which teams of researchers can be built as a prelude to developing new GRF proposals. Financial support can be provided for these teams if they decide to proceed with a GRF proposal.
