香港研究學院以「香港研究在世界」為策略方向，是因為香港長久以來都是一個面向世界的全球城市；因此推動香港研究的一個重要方向，就是把香港放置在全球城市的比較研究脈絡中，從而一方面將香港經驗貢獻予國際學術文獻，另一方面也將國際經驗轉移到香港以豐富本地社會討論。「全球城市圓桌會議」，就是我們推動「以香港為中心的全球城市研究」的策略性項目。

「全球城市圓桌會議」旨在建立一個對話平台，讓來自不同全球城市的學者專家和政策持份者聚首一堂，進行公共政策討論和學術研究。今年會議主題為亞洲的全球城市的流動性及開放性。第一節我們會討論「如何令香港繼續開放與流動？」，邀請洪雯議員作演說及與呂大樂教授作政策對話。第二節我們以「亞洲的全球城市所面對的挑戰 - 香港、新加坡與澳門」為主題，邀請羅祥國博士、楊鳴宇博士及黎穎瑜女士演說。透過「公眾對話」，讓學術界、政界、商界及公民社會的領袖，在全球城市研究的脈絡下，多角度地探討相關主題。第三節我們會邀請 James Farrer 教授作主題演講，探討上海“第三次”成為全球城市的地位。

我們熱切期待透過今次會議，與您建立各種合作機會。

呂大樂教授
香港研究學院總監

The Academy of Hong Kong Studies (AHKS) adopted the strategic direction of “Hong Kong in the World” in driving the development of Hong Kong Studies. Hong Kong is always a global city facing the whole world and therefore one of the effective ways to pursue Hong Kong Studies is to position Hong Kong within the context of inter-global city studies; by doing so, on the one hand we could make a contribution to international scholarly literature by theorizing Hong Kong as a case study of global city, while on the other hand we could enrich local discussion by transferring international experiences to Hong Kong. The Global City Roundtable is a strategic initiative which aims at fulfilling our mission to examine Hong Kong-centric subjects within the context of inter-global city studies.

The Global City Roundtable aims at providing a platform for informed discussions for academics, experts and policy stakeholders from different global cities. The Roundtable this year will be held in one day, addressing the topic of “Asian Global Cities’ Mobility and Openness”. In the first panel, we will examine the topic of “Making Hong Kong Open and Mobile, Again? | Explore Hong Kong’s New Path towards “Localized Globalization””, with a presentation delivered by Dr Hon HONG Wendy Wen. The second panel will be delivered by Dr LAW Cheung Kwok, Ms LAI Wing Yu Jade and Dr IEONG Meng U on the topic of “Asian Global Cities’ Challenges - Hong Kong, Singapore, and Macau”. Speakers share their views of the cases of Hong Kong, Singapore, Macau. The roundtable includes “Policy Dialogue”, “Public Discourse and “Keynote Speech”. Professor James Farrer will deliver a keynote speech on the topic of “Shanghai’s “Third Coming” as a Global City”.

We look forward to exchanging ideas and developing collaboration with you through this conference.

Explore Hong Kong's New Path towards "Localized Globalization"

Dr Wendy HONG (Legislative Council)

Globalization has been the fundamental driving force of the development and evolution of Hong Kong since its inception as an entrepôt. In response to shifting globalization trends over the past decades, Hong Kong has gone through a number of restructuring processes. The most recent restructuring since 2000 has greatly strengthened Hong Kong's role as an international financial center and amplified its global functions. It has become one of the few Global Cities in the world, and was included in a neologism "Nylonkong", linking three cities, New York, London, and Hong Kong as they were seen as the key nodes that formed a global network facilitating the globalization.

However, in tandem with such a transformation, the city has been heading toward a model of "Rootless Globalization" (離地全球化), where its global functions are disconnected with local development, and industries intimately linked to real economy are hollowing out. The results are severe polarization in society and shrinking upward social mobility.

Since the outbreak of the COVID-19 pandemic, strict mobility restrictions imposed by the government have weakened Hong Kong's international competitiveness, diminishing its fame as "Nylonkong".

It is urgent for Hong Kong to explore a new path towards globalization. This new path does not mean abandoning globalization; rather, it means enhancing the local dimension while restoring Hong Kong's global openness and restrengthening its international competitiveness. Hong Kong's international functions should not only serve the interaction between the East and the West, but also serve local demands and improve the lives of local people---such is a new paradigm of "localized globalization" (在地全球化) that I'm trying to explore on the platform of Legislative Council.

Shanghai's "Third Coming" as a Global City Professor James FARRER (Sophia University)

Shanghai in the 1990s regained its status as China's premier global city, rapidly increasing the cross-border flows of investment, trade, human mobility, and cultural exchanges that define a global city in economic, social, and cultural terms. This globality also has a historical dimension. Historian Jeffrey Wasserstrom wrote of the "second coming" of Shanghai as a global city (2003). Shanghainese celebrated a cosmopolitan cultural identity that hearkened back to Shanghai's Treaty Port century (1841-1943). Most notably, after 2000 Shanghai began incorporating hundreds of thousands of business migrants and students from developed countries into its economic, social, and cultural life. In the 2000s Shanghai's foreign population reached levels not seen since the 1930s, and even these globetrotting "expatriates" began celebrating Shanghai as a global metropolis (Farrer 2019). COVID-19 however has led to a sharp contraction in all the economic, social, and cultural dimensions of Shanghai's globality. It is an open question as to when and how Shanghai's global city status will recover, and what this "third coming" of Shanghai as a global city will look like. This talk will discuss Shanghai's global culture from an ethnographic perspective, using research on Shanghai's expatriate communities and cosmopolitan consumer culture before COVID to discuss the economic, social, and cultural dimensions of global city status. It outlines what ethnographic urban studies can tell us about what makes a global city.
